Nancy Stordahl

Author of Emerging: Stories from the Other Side of a Cancer Diagnosis, Loss, and a Pandemic

Target Audience

For anyone not living a fairy-tale life. Specifically, anyone who's been diagnosed with cancer, struggled during the COVID-19 pandemic, experienced loss, or other life-altering challenges. Additionally, baby boomers and pet lovers.

Bio

Nancy Stordahl is a former educator turned writer. She's been writing candidly about breast cancer, pink ribbon shenanigans, BRCA, loss and grief, pets, and family for over a decade on her popular blog NancysPoint.com. She's the author of Getting Past the Fear: A Guide to Help You Mentally Prepare for Chemotherapy and Cancer Was Not a Gift & It Didn't Make Me a Better Person, as well as numerous published articles. She grew up in Madelia, Minnesota, and currently lives in Wisconsin with her husband David. She has three adult children, two grandsons, a bunch of lovable grand pets, one cat, and recently added a French bulldog pup named Titus to the family.

About Emerging

Refusing to jump onto the "everything happens for a reason" bandwagon, Stordahl tackles tough topics like cancer, loss, and the COVID-19 pandemic with unflinching honesty while dismantling the "back to normal" myth. She reminds us we needn't pressure ourselves to emerge from these, or any life challenge, as new and improved versions of our former selves. Emerging is a refreshing, encouraging read for anyone who's struggled, or is struggling, with a life-altering challenge.
